Summary

The SDG Project Assessment Tool (referred to as SDG Tool) is developed by UN-Habitat as part of the Prosperity Fund Global Future Cities Programme. It is an offline, digital and user-friendly instrument to guide City Authorities and Delivery Partners in the development of more inclusive, sustainable and effective urban projects. The tool is used to improve the quality of urban projects in the planning, development and design phase, and promotes an enabling environment that ensures the viability of projects, while also steering a participatory process between City Authorities and Delivery Partners to develop strategies to optimize the project's alignment to the SDGs.

In the Global Future Cities Programme, the tool is currently being applied in the 19 cities of the Programme to define sustainable principles relevant to the local context and the project's requirements, to ensure effective application of the tool in the upcoming Implementation Phase of the Programme. The event will introduce the tool and discuss its current application, with speakers representing the different partners in the Programme including the Donor, city authorities, private sector partners, and UN-Habitat as a Strategic and Capacity Building Partner. It will open up a discussion on how the tool could be useful in other cities, and possibilities to develop the tool further to support more cities in achieving the SDGs.
