Transforming cities through attractive, efficient and sustainable public road transport systems

Buses and coaches being the most important form of urban and rural passenger transport around the world have been shaping sustainable mobility for more than a century.

Increases in population, shifting mobility patterns and a greater focus on environmental issues are changing the face of public transport. Whether over short or long distances, buses and coaches are one of the safest, greenest, most user-friendly, affordable and inclusive means of transport.

This side event aims at discussing the crucial role of Bus system in connecting different modes of urban transit, the carbon footprint of buses and coaches by implementing new low emission technology and role of buses and coaches in social cohesion for transforming cities through attractive, efficient and sustainable public road transport system.
