Title of Event
Innovative approaches to transforming urban transit systems

Organization Details
Organization: RMIT University
Organization Country: Australia

Summary
The format of the event involves two sessions of one hour duration each. The first begins with a welcome and introduction to transport network planning principles followed by group workshopping of case studies for public transport improvement, based on examples contributed by participants. The second half of the workshop will focus on enabling leadership for change and developing strategies and tactics that participants can apply to cultivate and support a culture of change in their public transport organisation. The event will finish with identification and distribution of relevant leadership development resources that practitioners can access and apply in their own settings. The opportunity will be offered for participants to form an ongoing collaborative network to diffuse and deepen the learnings about improving local public transit on an ongoing basis post-WUF. Training will be oriented to practitioners and professionals, however the content will be relevant to city leaders, policy makers, community leaders, and national and local officials who have an interest in public transport in cities.
